ARGUMENTS FOR A "YES" VOTE

- I. On the establishment of a modified parliamentary system: 1. Approval means the return to the people of the right to vote directly for their President who is the head of state and Chief Executive. Under the 1973 Constitution, the head of state (President) and the head of government (Prime Minister) are elected, not by the people directly, but by their elected representatives in the National Assembly. Restoring the direct right of the people to elect the President is more democratic, and conforms more to the traditions, culture, customs and habits of the Filipino people. 2. The stability of government and progress of the nation are assured. Political parties, under the regional system of election and through the leadership of the President, will become strong and real instruments for governing the nation. The President, the Prime Minister and the Batasang Pambansa work together in a well-balanced system of coordination and cooperation. They are not hampered by the doctrine of separation of powers. With strong party discipline, programs of government can be implemented faster. The long deadlocks and stalemates of the defunct Congress will not return. 3. The process of political normalization will be hastened. Once the President is elected this year (1981), he can then nominate the Prime Minister to be chosen by the Batasang Pambansa from among its members. Thus, we shall have made a total shift to the parliamentary system. 4. The creation of an Executive Committee composed of the Prime Minister and 14 other members to assist the President in the exercise of his powers and functions and in the performance of his duties provides for an effective training of leaders. There is a provision for a rule on succession because the Executive Committee shall exercise the powers and discharge the duties of the President when the President-elect dies, fails to qualify or when the President has not been chosen, suffers a permanent disability, dies, is removed by impeachment or resigns. 5. The qualifying age of the ceremonial President under the 1973 Constitution was fixed at 50 by the 1971 Con-Con. If a mere symbolic President without real powers has to be 50, why should it not be proper to require that a governing President with strong powers to be of the same age to assure maturity and stability of judgment for a judicious exercise of his powers? 6. The immunity from suit of the President and those who performed acts pursuant to his orders will ensure continuing national unity. There will be no vindictiveness against the out-going President. Only acts performed by subordinates pursuant to legal orders will be covered. Abuses are not included.
- II. On electoral reforms: 1. The right of political parties to be represented in the boards of inspectors, boards of canvassers, and other bodies is restored. This is expected to prevent electoral frauds and other irregularities. 2. To be accredited are the political parties that show real strength and power to attract votes. A two party system is contemplated. A system with many political parties is to be avoided because it leads to fragmentation, stalemates, and horsetrading.
- III. On the right of natural-born citizens who have been naturalized abroad to acquire land for residential purposes. This will encourage Filipinos who have lived abroad to return to their native-land to spend the rest of their days here and invest their well-earned savings in ventures beneficial to our people.

ARGUMENTS FOR REJECTION

ON QUESTION NO. 1 The Interim Batasang Pambansa has no legal power nor moral authority to propose any amendment to the Constitution.

The 'modified parliamentary system' concentrates both executive and legislative powers in the President as "the head of state and chief executive," without necessary check and balance.

(a) The President nominates the Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister. The heads of the Legislative Department are his nominees or personal choice; (b) The president may dissolve the Batasan -- and call for an election on a date set by him; (c) The fourteen members of the 'Executive Committee' are designated by the President and may be removed at the discretion of the President; (d) The term of six years of the President, without limitation or prohibition against re-election will enable the incumbent President to be the President from 1965 to 1973, from 1973 to 1981 under Martial Law, from 1981 to 1987 under the proposed amendment and during his lifetime. He can be President for life; (e) Immunity to the President and to other officers during and after their tenure violates "Accountability of Public Officers," which provides that "public office is a public trust" and "public officers shall remain Accountable to the people." Immunity is license to abuse, without criminal nor civil liability, for acts performed without or in excess of authority. Public officers who are public servants become masters of the people; (f) Regional and sectoral representatives to the National Assembly deprive electors of "Assembly district" of their right to elect their own representatives; (g) The qualifying age of fifty years for the ceremonial President as "the symbolic head of state" must not apply to the President as "the head of state and chief executive." The age of a member of the National Assembly is "at least 25 years," and the Speaker and Prime Minister are elected from the members thereof. The age of 50 years discriminates against the youth; (h) The 1976 Amendment No. 6 which permits Mr. Marcos at "his sole judgment" to "issue decrees and orders to form part of the law of the land" is not repealed, despite Proclamation No. 2045 ostensibly terminating martial law.

ON QUESTION NO. 2 Accreditation of political parties must not be based on the supposed elections of April 7, 1978, held under martial law, which was not "free, honest and orderly."

"The right to be represented in the registration board and similar bodies" must not be limited to supposed political parties, whose candidates "obtained the first and second highest number of votes" in the April 7, 1978 elections.

ON QUESTION NO. 3 "The Citizens Election Committee" in the local elections of January 30, 1980 Election Code (Pres. Decree No. 1296) under martial law must not govern future elections and/or plebiscite, and the Election Code before martial rule must be applied.
